DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

1. Claims 79-98, 100-109, 111-114, 116-122, 127, 131, 134, 136-137, 149, 156, 159-169 and 171-175 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Tran (6,202,060) in view of Tendler (5,555,286) & Broady (5,495,288) and further in view of Cheng (5,957,718).

Regarding claims 79-98, 100-109, 111-114, 116-122, 127, 131, 134, 136-137, 149, 156, 159-169 and 171-175, Tran discloses a portable handheld multimedia recorder/player/cellular telephone apparatus (See fig. 1) comprising: a microcontroller; a memory including built-in memory and replaceable interactive memory card for storing multimedia contents wherein the multimedia contents comprises sounds (i.e. music), still images (i.e. picture), combined sound with moving images (video) and GPS location information; means for recording and reproducing the multimedia contents to/from the memory, wherein means for recording and reproducing comprises audio recorder including microphone, video recorder including camera; speaker, display, coupled external playback devices (playback device is widely known in the art to comprise controls such as up/down or muting, forward, reverse, pause, etc. for audio/video playback functions); card socket for receiving, securing and removing the replaceable interactive memory card; means for uploading/downloading (import/export) the multimedia contents to/from external systems (i.e. Internet, PC, telephones, remote display, remote audio systems including a radio and/or players) via wired/wireless connections by utilizing built-in wired/wireless transceivers such as cellular transceiver (See fig. 1 and col. 2 line 52 to col. 3 line 38, column 5-15). However, Tran does not explicitly mention that the apparatus further comprises: telephone configuration settings such as ring tones, built-in satellite phone, remote wired microphone (i.e. electronic stethoscope), remote wired headset, environmental sensors such as light, smoke or poisonous gas; means for transmitting stored contents to external devices based upon activations of environmental sensors or remote activation signals; and the socket and card configurations as recited in claims. Since satellite phone or telephone with configuration settings is known in the art at the time the invention was made; therefore, it would have been obvious to one skilled in the art at the time the invention was made to configure the portable handheld multimedia recorder/player apparatus, as disclosed by Tran, with such features for the advantage of expanding the capability of the apparatus. Also, since Tran does suggest that the apparatus is capable to import/export contents to and from various types of electronic systems and or devices; therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to configure the apparatus with a remote wired microphone, a remote wired headset for the advantage of expanding the capability of the apparatus to accommodate various user intended uses. Further, since the concept of activating a system or device to record/transmit stored content including GPS information to a predetermined external system or device (by dialing a pre-loaded number) based upon activations of sensors such as motion sensor or remote activation signals is known in the art as taught by Tendler (See fig. 1 and col. 5 line 50 to col. 8 line 14) and Broady (See fig. 1 and col. 2 line 34 to col. 3 line 60); therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to apply the concept of Tendler & Broady in modifying the apparatus, as disclosed by Tran, with such activation means (i.e. with smoke, motion, or sound sensor) for the advantage of allowing user to remotely control the device as well as providing various means of automatically activation for the system. Finally, since Cheng teaches a device for receiving memory card of a portable communication device with the socket and card configurations as recited in claims (See figs. 1, 4-7 and col. 2 line 35 to col. 3 line 58); therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to apply the teachings of Cheng in modifying the replaceable interactive memory card with its card socket for the advantage of preventing incorrect insertion of the memory card as well as allowing user to judge whether the card is going to be inserted correctly or incorrectly based on the corner-cut of the memory card.

Response to Arguments
